		two activities in which students identified homophones and homonyms and completed sentences by selecting the correct word from two given options. Organized the activities as a boys-versus-girls competition to encourage quick participation and engagement. Concluded with a rapid verbal review in which students identified whether given words were homophones or homonyms.	Assessment	01
9	30-9-2026 (Wednesday)	Started the lesson with an interactive story about a grandmother and a girl. The girl wanted to take a break and wrote "Let's eat grandma" on a paper without punctuation. I used the sentence to show students how punctuation can change meaning and introduced the importance of punctuation. Then, Students worked in pairs to add punctuation to given sentences. After that, I introduced punctuation and capitalization, focusing on some main punctuation marks: full stop, question mark, exclamation mark, comma, colon, and semicolon. Conducted two activities: I provided students with a paragraph without punctuation, and they rewrite it by adding the appropriate punctuation marks. In the second activity, students corrected sentences by fixing the punctuation errors.	Strengthen students' punctuation, capitalization, sentence correction, editing and proofreading skills through interactive, pair, and written activities. Improved my ability to introduce language concepts through meaningful contexts and practical examples.	05

11	02-10-2026 (Friday)	Introduced the students to the "Prompt Spark" activity and explained how it develops cognitive and speaking skills. I wrote the activity name and instructions on the white board and placed the prompt chits in a bowl. The students passed a ball among themselves, and whenever I clapped, they stopped. The student holding the ball picked a chit, came to the dais, took 30 seconds to organize their thoughts, and then delivered a two-minute speech on the given prompt. The activity encouraged spontaneous speaking, public speaking, quick thinking, idea organization, confidence, interaction, and active participation in a fun academic setting. After the activity, I gave students brief feedback on their performance, focusing on their confidence, fluency, clarity, pronunciation , organization of ideas , and ability to speak spontaneously. I also discussed areas where they could improve their speaking and encouraged them to participate more confidently. At the end of class, I took on overview of the previous topics covered during my internship classes and asked students what they had learned from them. I also took their feedback about the activities, including which activities they enjoyed and how they found them helpful for their learning and participation. This helped me reflect on students' learning, participation, and response to the activities conducted throughout the internship.	Developed class management, activity management, communication, clear instruction-giving, student interaction, spontaneous speaking, public speaking, confidence, quick thinking, idea organization, cognitive thinking, active listening, and participation skills.	03

12	7-10-2026 (Wednesday)	Introduced PRESENTATIONAL SKILLS and explained the key stages of an effective presentation. Students were guided on how to plan their content by understanding the topic, selecting relevant information,identifying the audience, and preparing a basic structure with an attractive introduction, organized body , and effective conclusion. Explained how to design effective visuals aids,including slides and charts. To demonstrate the value o visualization, I explained that simply telling students about an apply may be less memorable, whereas showing them a picture a picture of an apple helps them visualize the object and understand the information more easily.Discussed practice and delivery, emphasizing practising the presentation three times, avoiding a rigid posture , managing time, making eye contact and reducing unnecessary fillers. Introduce techniques for managing nervousness, including the idea that nervousness is normal, a simple 30-second breathing technique, and ways to break the ice. Students were also guided on handling questions by listening carefully, pausing before responding, answering in simple and clear language , remaining calm, honestly acknowledging when they do not know an answer and offering to respond later. Concluded the lesson with a quick checklist before presenting the topic. In the end, provided students with hints and assigned presentation topics for preparation, informing them that they would present in the next class.	Strengthened students' presentation planning, content organization, visual communication, public speaking , delivery , audience awareness, time management, eye contact, confidence, question-handling, and self-evaluation skills. Also developed my ability to teach presentation skills through structured guidance, practical examples, and preparation tasks.	05

13	8-10-2026 (Thursday)	Attended the internship class. Maim discussed that the internship would conclude in the upcoming week and provided guidance on completing the internship report and maintaining the e-portfolio. Moreover, she also gave a deadline for submitting the completed report and e-portfolio.	Developed organizational, time-management, documentation, and portfolio management skills. Strengthened the ability to follow submission requirements and manage internship documentation systematically.	01
14	9-10-2026 (Friday)	Conducted student presentation on three assigned topics:Corruption in Pakistan: Causes and Effects, Artificial Intelligence: Pros and Cons, and The Effects of Copy Culture on Education. Students applied the presentation skills framework taught in the previous class. They organized their content into an introduction, body, and conclusion, used icebreakers to engage the audience, maintained eye contact, and presented their ideas clearly. During the presentations, students answered spontaneous questions, and the audience actively participated by asking multiple questions. I also concluded an interactive question-and-answer session to engage with students, encourage them to share their ideas , and stimulate their thinking. After the presentations, I provided feedback and highlighted areas for improvement. Finally, I conducted an MCQs activity to reinforce students' understanding of the main components of presentation skills, including content planning, presentation structure , visual aids, effective delivery, audience engagement , managing nervousness, and handling questions.	Strengthened students' presentation, public speaking, content organization, confidence, audience engagement, eye contact, time management, spontaneous question-handling, and active listening skills. Encouraged critical thinking, participation, and respectful audience behaviour. Improved my ability to interact with students, engage young mind through questioning , evaluate presentations, provide constructive feedback, and reinforce learning through an MCQs activity.	03

15	14-10-2026 (Wednesday)	Introduced Narration, focusing on direct and indirect speech , and explained their basic differences with examples on the board. Discussed the rules for changing direct speech into indirect speech and indirect speech into direct speech, including the identification of reporting speech and reported speech, the use of reporting verbs, and changes in pronouns, tenses ,time and place expressions where necessary. Briefly introduced the five types of sentences used in narration: assertive, interrogative, imperative, exclamatory, and optative sentences, with a particular focus on assertive or declarative sentences. To make the lesson interactive, involved students in identifying direct and indirect indirect speech in example sentences and asked questions to check their understanding. Encouraged students to explain the rules in their own words and participate in solving examples on the board. Furthermore, conducted two activities: the first required students to change sentences from direct speech into indirect speech, while the second focused on changing sentences from indirect speech into direct speech. Guided students during both activities, clarified their difficulties, and helped them correct their mistakes by applying the relevant rules. These activities provided students with practical experience in sentence transformation and strengthened their understanding of narration.	Developed students' grammatical understanding, sentence transformation, rule application, analytical thinking, and written accuracy. Encouraged active participation, critical thinking, problem-solving, and confidence in answering grammatical questions. Strengthened my ability to explain grammar rules through examples, engage students in interactive learning, identify learning difficulties, provide immediate guidance, and reinforce understanding through structured activities.	05

17	16-10-2026 (Friday)	Introduced letter writing and explained the two main types, formal and informal letters. Discussed their differences in purpose, tone, language, structure, and audience, explaining that formal letters are used for official or professional purposes, such as business inquiries, whereas informal letters are written to friends and family. Showed students samples of informal and formal business letters to help them understand their formats and language. Furthermore, introduced business letter writing and explained its essential components, including the sender's address, date, inside address, subject line, body, complimentary closing, signature, and name. Explained the purpose of each component, how to arrange them in the correct order, and how to organize the body into clear paragraphs using formal language. To make the lesson interactive, asked students questions about letter formats and encouraged them to identify the components in the samples. Conducted a writing activity in which students wrote an inquiry letter about office supplies, applying the correct format and professional language.	Developed students' formal writing, professional communication, letter organization, and understanding of appropriate language and tone. Strengthened their ability to distinguish between formal and informal letters, identify business letter components, and write an inquiry letter. Also improved my skills in explaining writing conventions, engaging students through questions, guiding practical activities, and identifying learning difficulties.	03
